

Shinpiden Level Training

Description:

Shinpiden Level will appeal to people that wish to be able to teach Jikiden Reiki. Shinpiden level itself can be subdivided into the following sub-levels that are taken progressively.

- Shihan Kaku (Assistant Teacher – can teach up to Shoden Level)
- Shihan (Teacher – can teach up to Shoden and Okuden Levels)
- Dai Shihan (translates literally as “Big Teacher” – can teach up to Shihan Kaku Level)

The only person that can grant Shihan / Dai Shihan levels is our Sensei (a term of respect for a teacher) Master Tadao Yamaguchi, the head of the Jikiden Reiki Institute (pictured right). This is very much in line with traditional Japanese thinking as in traditional Japanese healing systems and martial arts and martial arts systems. Where only the head of the school / lineage could take students to the highest level(s) of the system. Fortunately Yamaguchi Sensei teaches in the UK occasionally and we will organise training courses with him including Shinpiden level for Jikiden Reiki practitioners that ready, willing and able. In Jikiden Reiki the use of the word Master is played down and you will notice that none of the Shinpiden Levels mentions the word. Like the founder of Reiki Mikao Usui, we prefer to think that there is always room to develop ourselves. Tadao Yamaguchi has earned the title because of his 40+ years of experience of Reiki and his position as head of the lineage.

Pre-requisites:

There is no fast track way of becoming a Jikiden Reiki teacher. In addition to having a real desire to spread Jikiden Reiki in the world there are numerous requirements. These include repeating Shoden and Okuden levels at least once and gaining experience giving treatments.

Opportunities:

Those that move on to Shinpiden Level will be able to

- Hold their own seminars
- Organise Seminars with Master Yamaguchi
- Own a full size Gokai-no-sho (scroll depicting the 5 principles) – compulsory for Shihan's
- Open an official branch of the Jikiden Reiki Institute (from Shihan level)
